GOVERNMENT TO TERMINATE ITS SHIP INTERESTS

Will Get Completely Out Of Shipping Business.

LOSSES ENORMOUS

Liquidation Of Venture
Will Prove Knotty
Problem.

Washington, June 11.—The United States government is going to get out of the shipping business just as fast as is consistently possible. Already having suffered financial losses that mount high into the millions in the operation of the fleet, facing a net loss of nearly three billions in the liquidation of the shipping board's affairs and with the whole shipping situation a prolific source of criticism and condemnation in congress, administration leaders have decided that the best thing to do for the government and for the furtherance of the nation's mercantile interests generally is to get out of the business, bag and baggage, and leave to private enterprise the task of keeping the American flag on the seven seas.

This will be the policy laid down by President Harding himself next week when he meets with the new shipping board for the first time to take an inventory of the situation. The board will organize Monday and on Tuesday it will meet the Chief executive to hear an outline of policy.

The length of time necessary to get the government out of the shipping business with the least financial loss is problematical. Some of President Harding's advisers think it will take two years, others are of the opinion the job cannot be accomplished under three.

In any event it is not expected that the new chairman, Albert D. Lasker, of Chicago will serve out the six year term to which he has been appointed.

The manner in which the liquidation of the government's venture into the shipping business is to be accomplished is the problem that is proving a knotty one for the administration.

Hundreds of ships constructed under the stress of war emergency are tied up at wharves or are riding at anchor in the ports of the Atlantic and Pacific. The steel ships are rusting and the wooden ones are rotting under disuse. The guarding and maintenance alone costs the government nearly half a billion dollars a year.

The ships represent a net investment to the government of between three and four billion dollars. At the present price of tonnage it will be difficult to realize more than $75,000,000 in a forced sale if indeed, that amount could be obtained.

This enormous difference must ultimately be charged off on the government's books to war expense and the American people must make up their minds to swallow it, according to the consensus that has been gathered by the president and his advisers.

The liquidation will be a slow process and designed to extract the last possible penny for the benefit of the government, it was said today but the end is in sight—the government under the administration policy is going to get out of the shipping business and stay out.

"MYSTERY MAN" IN SHOW WINDDW DRAWS AUDIENCE

Columbus, June 11.—The nearest approach to the "perfect man" that Columbus ever has seen arrived yesterday afternoon and took his seat in the display window of the Katz-Bryce store.

Exceptionally good looking, dressed in the latest style, he watches the crowds pressing about the window with remarkable nonchalance. After a short time, the curtains are drawn for a few moments. When they part again, he is in another position, still perfectly quiet and with the same inscrutable look.

If he is a real live man, how can he pose, for such a length of time without the flicker of an eyelash or the ghost of a smile? And, if he is only a wax figure, how could he possibly appear so realistic? These are the questions that puzzled the crowd yesterday.

PREPARE FOR VISITORS. Cleveland, O., June 11.—They swept and garnished the old jail here to receive its distinguished guests.

Mrs. Kaber is the first woman of note to occupy one of its cells since Mrs. Cassia Chadwick, who victimized bankers in Ohio and Pennsylvania out of hundreds of thousands of dollars, spent the days awaiting her trial in 1904 within its confined walls.

The women's clubs of Cleveland are today demanding that additional matrons be provided to take care of three unusual prisoners.

Peace Resolution Delayed As Committees Disagree

Republican Members Of House Foreign Affairs Committee Revolt Against Alleged Domination Of Senate Body.

Washington, June 11.—Behind the threatened deadlock between Senate and House Republican leaders on the Knox-Porter peace resolutions is a revolt of Republican members of the house foreign affairs committee against what they term the attempted domination of the Republican members of the senate foreign relations committee it was declared today.

The long promised termination of technical state of war between the United States and the central powers is being further delayed while the dispute between the Republicans on the two committees over the most practical way to reestablish the United States on a peace basis continues to rage with little or no prospect of immediate settlement.

Both sides claim to possess the president's tacit approval. Both admit, however they are not quite sure of his attitude, except that he has signified a desire that the Senate and house try themselves to find a way to bring about peace.

House Republican leaders openly proclaim that the senate must keep on its preserve and that while they recognize the prerogatives of the senate foreign relations committee must no longer be considered a mere rubber stamp in the moulding of international problems by the senate committee, with the senate not in session today the house engaged in what promised to be an all day wrangle over the Porter resolution intended by its supporters as a substitute for the Knox measure.

FIND MUTILATED BODY OF CHILD BURIED IN CELLAR OF RESIDENCE

Seven-Year-Old Matilda Russo, Missing Since June 4, Found Brutally Murdered at House Next Door To Her Home

Moorestown, N. J., June 11.—Discovery of the horribly mutilated body of seven-year-old Matilda Russo, who had been missing since June 4, set the town and county authorities working today on one of the most brutal murders on record in this section.

The child's nude body was found beneath three feet of earth in the cellar of a colored man's home—that of Louis Lively, adjoining the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. Michael Russo, who have been frantic with fear for their daughters life ever since she dropped from sight a week ago today.

A search for Lively was organized immediately after Police Chief Bradshaw and Patrolman Jacobs of Moorestown had unearthed the child's body. When last seen she wore a brown suit and a straw hat. It was between 7 and 8 o'clock last Saturday that Little Matilda suddenly vanished.

About an hour later Lively disappeared, the police learned and he did not reappear until Sunday night. Lively's wife has been away from home two weeks. She returned last night. No sooner had she entered her home than Police Chief Bradshaw demanded entrance and began the search that resulted in the gruesome discovery.

JIMMY BLANGY IS HELD IN COLUMBUS FOR EXAMINATION

Final disposition of Jimmy Blangy, 10, who shot and killed his brother, Virgil, aged eight, at their home near Cedarville last Tuesday, will be delayed now longer than expected awaiting the report of Dr. H. H. Goddard, of the Bureau of Juvenile Research, before whom the boy was taken Friday for a mental test.

Probation Officer Joseph Watts, who took the lad to Columbus Friday morning, returned without him. So interesting did Jimmy's case appear to the alienist, that he decided to keep him several days, and will notify local authorities when he can be returned here for the action of local authorities.

The mental test usually given by Dr. Goddard, takes but a few minutes it is said, but the alienist seemed to be more interested in the case of the local boy. "I want to keep this boy for a while," he told Mr. Watts, "his case is very interesting."

It was expected that the boy would be returned here Friday and would be given an appearance before Juvenile Judge J. Carl Marshall Saturday morning, and his case disposed of. Instead Jimmy is still with Dr. Goddard, and will probably remain in Columbus several days, while the physician examines his case. Local authorities have no intimation of when the boy will be returned here for his appearance.

MARTIAL LAW IN DUBLIN EXPECTED

Dublin, June 11.—Early enforcement of martial law in this city is generally expected by leading business men. Already the British military authorities have issued a warning that the use of cycles in counties Dublin, Wicklow and Meath will be forbidden if the attacks on government troops continue on government troops.

One of the latest official British orders state, that owners or occupants of premises in the vicinity overlooking Dublin Castle will be "shot at sight" if they venture on roofs without having first obtained official permission.

Cosacks are reported to have already crossed the Turkish frontier and have entered the important fortified harbor city of Trebizond.

ADMIRAL SIMS ORDERED HOME BY SECY. DENBY

Washington, June 11.—Secretary of the Navy Denby sent a cable today to Rear Admiral William Snowdon Sims, at London, peremptorily ordering him home as the result of the series of speeches the head of the naval war college has made in England.

The following cablegram was sent to Admiral Sims:

"Remainder of your leave revoked. You will return to the United States at once and report in person to the Secretary of the Navy. (Signed) Denby."

The secretary took this action without having received a reply to his cable demand for an explanation of Admiral Sims' utterance. Write the reason for today's peremptory summons home was not revealed it is believed that annoyance at Admiral Sims' slowness in replying was in the main responsible.

OIL WINS OVER COAL

New York, June 11.—Oil won the trans-Atlantic race against coal today when the Cunard liner Aquitania docked after making the trip from Liverpool in six days, beating the Mauretania of the same line. Both left Liverpool a week ago today at about the same time. The Aquitania burns oil, the Mauretania coal. It was the first time that the relative merits were tested in such a "blue ribbon" contest. Cunard officials discountenanced the idea of a race but the captains admittedly made the voyage a friendly speed rivalry and shipping agnates and sportsmen bet considerable sums on the outcome. The Mauretania, as luck—or maybe the inferior coal she was forced to use on account of the British coal strike—would have it, made the slowest trip in her history. She will not dock till Monday some time. She had to stop over at Cherbourg for coal. The Mauretania still holds the world record of four days, ten hours, 41 minutes, made before the war, at an average speed of 26.06 knots an hour. The Aquitania's best average is 23 knots.

Kaber was stabbed twenty-four times while helpless in his bed. Examination revealed that he had also been fed arsenic while ill. Mrs. Brickel was arrested in Cleveland. Mrs. Kaber and daughter were arrested in

New York. A woman suspected of feeding the arsenic to Kaber and the man believed to be "the man with the cap," named by Kaber before he died, are also held. Mrs. Brickel was the first to confess that the killing of Kaber was deliberately planned. Now Mrs. Kaber and Marion have admitted that assassins were hired.

Public Opinion In Mexico Over War Scare Subsides

Hope Expressed That Mexico and United States May Find Common Ground for Establishment Of Relations.

Mexico City, June 11.—Public opinion in the Mexican capital was much calmer today after almost a week of excitement, bordering on a "war scare." There were symptoms of universal hope that a basis may be found without much further delay upon which Mexico and the United States will build a new relationship devoid of the bones of contention that have endangered the peace of the two nations in the past.

The Mexican public generally appears inclined to support the attitude of President Obregon which is summed up in his refusal to sign the protocol of the proposed treaty with the United States prior to recognition of his government by Washington.

Prominent members of the Mexican senate joined in the endorsement of Obregon's policy and expressed the view that the United States should abide by the treaty of Guadalupe, signed in 1848 after the Mexican war.

Other officials representing a less conciliatory element voiced the opinion that the big powers of the world do not as in former times resort to arbitration if they can force their will upon the smaller nations. Those who represent this view try to back up their arguments with the statement that "if the United States desires a friendly treaty it should not demand or dictate it but take the course of friends give-and-take negotiations."

General Calles, minister of the interior, reflected the general new

MRS. BERGDOLL PAYS FINE; ESCAPES JAIL

Philadelphia, June 11.—Mrs. Emma C. Bergdoll, mother of the Bergdoll brothers, convicted army deserters, saved herself and her four co-defendants charged with conspiracy to aid Grover C. and Erwin R. Bergdoll to evade army service from going to jail by paying $23,000 in fines recently imposed by the U. S. district court here.

A certified check drawn by Charles A. Braun, one of Mrs. Bergdoll's son who changed his name because of the notoriety given the name Bergdoll by Grover, was given to the clerk of the court "under protest."

It is understood an appeal from the conviction will be taken. Mrs. Bergdoll, Braun and James E. Romig, a friend of the family, were sentenced on May 17 to a year and a day in prison and fined $7,000 each, and Harry S. Schub and Albert S. Mitchell, an automobile salesman, were sentenced to six months and $1,000 fine. The court, however, allowed that if the fines were paid before June 13 the prison sentences would be remitted.

NOT GUILTY IS PLEA OF WOMAN AND DAUGHTER

Accused Women Are Arraigned Before
Judge.

EVIDENCE OBTAINED

Are Confronted With Women Arrested In Sandusky.

Cleveland, O., June 11.—Pleas of "not guilty" were entered by Mrs. Eva Catherine Kaber, and her daughter, Miss Marian McArdle, when arraigned before Judge Maurice Bernon in common pleas court here this morning for the murder of Mrs. Kaber's husband, Daniel F. Kaber, wealthy Lakewood publisher.

Judge Bernon set down the cases for trial on June 28.

Showing the effect of a sleepless night, mother and daughter were brought into the courtroom over the "bridge of sighs" under the guard of two policemen and a woman matron. When newspaper photographers attempted to secure their pictures they held fashion magazines in front of their faces.

The examination was extremely brief. After the formal reading of the indictment, Judge Bernon turned to the older woman, alleged chief in one of the strangest murder plots in history, and said:

"You are the defendant?"

"Yes," was the scarcely audible reply.

"How do you wish to plead?"

"Not guilty," was the answer. Marian seemed to be more composed than her mother. She spoke in a tone that could be heard throughout the courtroom, as she answered the formal questions propounded to her.

Are Also

Contrary to expectations the women were not accompanied by counsel, Francis W. Poulson, a Cleveland attorney, had been expected to appear, as he had once acted as Mrs. Kabers attorney in this matter when he appeared in court and asked that bond be fixed for her following her indictment and before her arrest in New York.

Both were held without bail and taken back to their cells in the county jail.

A jail matron has been detailed to watch constantly in the cell occupied by Mrs. Kaber for any attempt to end her life.

Mrs. Kaber wore a heavy veil over her face.

She seemed to have trouble in hearing Judge Bernon and twice asked him to repeat his questions.

Mrs. Kaber wore a dark blue suit and black hat. Her daughter also was dressed in blue and wore a small hat with green ribbon trimmings. Her feet were encased in high heeled oxfords and she wore dark brown gauntlet gloves.

Record time was made by Judge Bernon in the formal proceedings. The prisoners entered the courtroom about 9:35 and were back in their cells adjoining the courthouse about 10 minutes later.

The courtroom was crowded to the doors with spectators but many of those who heard the arraignment were prisoners themselves awaiting their own arraignment.

Admissions Obtained

Important admissions from mother and daughter were obtained at the long examinations at the central police station, which ended only as dawn began to break this morning. This questioning began upon their arrival, and was only interrupted long enough to permit of the taking of photographs for the police records.

At this examination mother and daughter were confronted with the woman arrested in Sandusky Wednesday morning and statements damaging both to herself, Mrs. Kaber and Miss McArdle were obtained from her.

Declared by Prosecutor Edward C. Stanton to be the woman who supplied the arsenic which failed to act with sufficient celerity to suit those plotting the death of the rich publisher, she admitted that she furnished "medicine" to select patients.

Emerging from an hour and a half conference with Mrs. Kaber, her daughter, Marian McArdle and her mother, Mrs. Brickel, Attorney Francis Poulson announced that he did not believe that the case would come to trial before next fall. He explained that the law required a lapse of thirty days which would necessarily extend the date beyond the normal end of the spring term of court. Mr. Poulson also said that he intended to ask bond for Marian. Prosecutor Stanton has indicated that he is willing for Marian to be set to bond.

IT IS OUR MOVE.

President Harding should, without delay or hesitation, call a conference for halting the building of navies and the creation of armies. Great Britain and Japan should be summoned to the council table.

The time has come when the three great naval Powers—Great Britain, Japan and America—should sit down and talk over an agreement. Great Britain is ready and Japan will respond. There is no doubt of America's readiness. The world is anxious that such a conference be called and such a move be made. In all of earth's free nations there is a great body of sentiment that would welcome such action on the part of the three great sea Powers.

Steadily the unchecked currents carry us toward misunderstandings and trouble that may flare redly at any time. We drift on toward greater navies, greater burdens on already tax-burdened peoples, as the race for armaments gathers speed and determination.

We all are drifting as the world drifted before 1914. Great Britain builds super-Hoods and seaplanes; Japan is busy with her "8-8 program;" America is trying to appropriate $40,000,000 for the world's super-navy.

Chemists are playing with gases. Super-guns are being evolved. Airplanes are to carry the "Breath of Death" over battlefields of the next war. The same old secret, watchful, deadly moves are going on just as they did in the generation before 1914. The thunder-heads of the next storm are blue on the horizons.

We have been told over and over again that the next war means the Death of Civilization. Yet we go on germinating the seeds of death, and no Government raises a hand to check or stay us.

President Harding is one of the world's commanding figures. If he will call Japan and Great Britain, they will respond. It is his duty and it should be his high privilege to summon the men of Japan and of Britain to grave council.

The call will be heeded. Should governments hesitate, the force of public opinion will drive them to the council table. Without faltering or delay, President Harding should call a conference on armaments.—Public Ledger.

ADMIRAL SIMS NOTED FOR EXTREME FRANKNESS.

Admiral Sims long has been noted for extreme frankness in the expression of his views. He more than once has plunged into hot water for voicing them with what many thought was more valor than discretion.

His opinions of Sinn Fein activities often have been aired. In the Admiral's book on the war, "The Victory at Sea," which received the Pulitzer prize last week, he openly charged Sinn Feiners in Ireland with having connived with Germany during the war, and declared they could be held accountable for the loss of many American lives during the submarine war. Admiral Sims repeated the charge publicly in a speech before the Loyal Coalition in Boston in the closing months of Secretary Daniel's administration of the Navy Department. Irish organizations made representations to Secretary Daniels, but it did not become known whether Admiral Sims was called to account or not.

Admiral Sims' most notable other "indiscretion" was also committed in London. The occasion was in 1910 when as captain of the battleship Pennsylvania anchored in the Thames, he spoke at a luncheon given in honor of his ship in Guild Hall—the historic municipal palace of London where the "freedom of the city" is extended to distinguished foreigners. Captain Sims declared that "if the time ever came when Anglo-Saxon liberties were endangered, every man and every dollar America had would come to their rescue." There was a great hub-bub in the United States over that speech, and President Taft administered a mild reprimand to Captain Sims. Frequently during the war, both in England and the United States, Admiral Sims jocularly referred to that prophecy and what he described as its complete fulfillment.

UNSCHOOLED CHILDREN.

The child unschooled today is likely to be the man unskilled tomorrow.

At present, through various economic anomalies, unskilled labor often commands a higher wage than trained abilities. But the value of an education has not declined. No greater wrong can a parent commit upon a child than to defraud him of the chance to learn.

Dr. John T. Tigert, the new Commissioner of Education, says 5,000,000 enrolled children are not attending school. Some, of course, elude the truant officer and play hooky. But many are kept out of school not because their parents actually need them. There is an extra profit to be realized from child labor. Greed for gain overbalances a proper and a decent consideration for the child's welfare.

What is to be done about it? In every possible way there should be insistence on what it means to go to school and what it means to stay out of school in the all-important formative years.

There are mournful examples on every hand of those who in youth undervalued the privilege of learning or through sad mischance were kept from it.

Parents themselves must be taught the value of an education. They are not fit to have children if they do not want them to enjoy even greater and better privileges than their own childhood knew.

RIPPLING RHYMES EVENING HOURS.

The day with its worries is ended at last, its troubles and hurries are things of the past; the sun has descended, the night shadows close, the evening is splendid, it brings me repose. All day I was drilling and sweating around, and mowing and milling and pawing the ground; I weeded the onions and wrestled with trees until I had bunions on fingers and knees. And off in my toiling I murmured, "By James! What profits this mowing? What good are men's games? We labor and labor, and labor some more, till Death with his sabre comes up to the door. We're plowing or hewing or building a wall: what good are we doing? What use is it all? We fill up the hollow, we drain out the weir; and people who follow won't know we were here." And now in the gloaming my rest is so sweet, I think of my roaming around in the heat, and know that it fitted my soul for this hour, and I am acquitted of charges so dour. I carried my burden until day's close, and this is the guerdon—a tired man's repose.

1901--Twenty Years Ago--1921

Mr. Luther, the new superintendent of the D. and X. traction line, says that he will not take charge of the roads until the new feed wire is connected so that both roads can be operated from one power house which is to be soon. The principal office will be in Dayton.

The Sons of Veterans' Band will give another of its popular concerts in the Xenia Opera House on the 25th of June and is now preparing for same. This organization has become famous throughout the country for its splendid music, winning plaudits in several of the large cities where it has played.

The incorporation of the Buckeye Shoe Company for this city with a capital stock of $50,000 marks another step forward for Xenia. Work will be at once started on the erection of a building and before many months the product of the new factory will be sent throughout the country. While the new company is separate from the Xenia Shoe Company, the companies will be operated together to a certain extent.

The new company which recently assumed control of the old distillery at Trebeins has put a force of forty or fifty men at work there and the work of tearing down parts of the old structure and remodeling the old part is now under way.

Mr. Oliver Jack, of Dayton, Kentucky, and Miss Cassie McCabe of Xenia, were granted a license on Monday for Port Kentucky, and the young people are now happily married.

THE GREATEST SALESMAN ON EARTH

A Creator
Pocketbooks
Buyer's Eyes
Beck and Call
To the Customer

AN EDITORIAL ON ADVERTISING

Any sales executive knows full well the part played by adequate advertising in reaching and creating a buying state of mind in the consumer. He knows also the importance of advertising in lightening the demands upon the buyer's pocketbook.

Without advertising, therefore, both his interests and those of his customers would suffer.

Advertising, co-operating with the sales staff, gives advance information to buyers about the merchandise for sale and as a direct creator of buyer-interest it lightens the merchants or manufacturer's duties by introducing and identifying him his house and his goods. It is also his guarantee to the buyer that whatever he offers for sale is trustworthy, and can be bought right under the security of the printed word.

Advertising inspires the salesman to his best effort in the buyer's behalf. It enables him to talk more intelligently to the customer. For with the knowledge that the person he is trying to sell is already more or less familiar with his goods through the printed word or picture, he marshals his facts with greater ease.

Every merchant and manufacturer, and each of their respective salesmen, knows how magnificently advertising works keeping the message of their merchandise under the buyer's eyes.

This great salesman—advertising—is at the beck and call of the smallest business, ready and willing to work for any man who has the courageous conviction necessary to bear the comparatively small cost of his hire.

It is a dynamic force that has built many of the world's greatest fortunes, because it has not only truthfully and conscientiously served the firms it represented, but because it has served also the homes into which their advertised products went.

Not long ago a statement made at a meeting of business executives in one of our Middle Western cities focused the attention of the business world on the value of advertising. A prominent Government official present there said: "The time has come when every manufacturer and merchant must figure advertising cost and carry it on his budget as an expense as essential as rent or labor."

"The name of the small merchant today who has foresight in the merchandising of his products may be as well known as that of the greatest merchant or the nationally known manufacturer. His products are known by his advertising, and his success depends on the merits of the products he furnishes to the customer that the advertising brings to him."

The relation of advertising to the reading public was never so clearly defined.

PASSES AWAY AT HOME ON FRIDAY

The Commencement exercises Friday closes the week's series of closing exercises at the College.

Practical Business Talks

KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE BIG THING.

"I think I'll have to change my ad. I met one of my competitors at the club and he kidded me unmercifully about it."

So spoke an otherwise sensible business man. He made the mistake so many men make of advertising to their competitors instead of advertising to the buying public.

This accounts for the appearance of so many advertisements in newspapers and magazines devoted to general bragging.

The public is little interested in knowing whether one concern beat last year's record in sales, or whether one company does a larger business than another company.

The buyers are interested in their own needs. The public wants to know where it can buy the best goods at the lowest prices. It will do business where the inducements are the best, regardless of the age of a concern or its comparative sales record.

The business man who worries because his competitor was amused at the advertisement he was running was bothered himself unnecessarily. Did the advertising get the business? That is the important question. His competitor's approval or disapproval will not help him to dispose of his stock.

We all worry a lot about trivial things, anyway things not worth a bat of an eyelash. And worry is the thing which tires men out and makes them old before their time. Banish worry. It does no good. Worry never sold a pair of shoes or a washing machine and never will.

Keep your eye on the main chance.

WITH THE OHIO SOLONS

C. C. WALTERMIRE, CORRESPONDENT OHIO REPUBLICAN
EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION.

Columbus, O., June 11.—The announcement from Washington of the appointment of Major A. A. Haynes, Editor of the Hillsboro Dispatch, to succeed John F. Kraer, of Mansfield, as Federal Dry Commissioner, leaves that important government post in the hands of an Ohioan.

There were two Ohio candidates, Major Haynes and Newton M. Fairbanks, of Springfield. The successful candidate was backed by Senator Willis and the Anti-Saloon League and it is regarded as a signal victory for the Ohio Senator and Superintendent James A. White, of the league in Ohio.

The appointment of Major Haynes is a disappointment to the organization Republicans of the state who contended that Mr. Fairbanks, a recognized dry, for years an active and contributing Republican, should have been given this place.

Major Haynes is a man of high personal character was county manager of the dry federation in his county in successive campaigns, is prominent in Methodist activities and hails from the town where the temperance work originated in 1873. He is thirty-nine years of age and before becoming Editor of the Hillsboro Dispatch was head master of the Miami Military Institute at German town, Ohio. He is a candidate for the congressional nomination in 1912 against Congressman Tamm. He was married to Catherine Mason, of Lancaster, Kentucky in 1903. He is a warm personal friend of Senator Willis and has always been an ardent supporter of the President.

The appointment this week of Judge C. S. Younger, of Celina, to be Assistant Superintendent of Insurance is looked upon by Republicans generally and especially those of the Fourth Congressional District to be an excellent selection.

Judge Younger was twice elected Probate Judge of Mercer County, the second Republican to ever be elected to county office in this Democratic stronghold. The other Republican was elected forty years ago.

Judge Younger is a past grand master of the Odd Fellows Lodge in Ohio and now is Grand Representative of the Sovereign Grand Lodge and is a member of the Masonic Fraternity.

In making this appointment Governor Davis recognized a man of ability, as well as one with sterling qualities. Judge Younger has been a director of The Gem City Life Insurance Company, of Dayton, and has much experience relative to fire insurance.

Judge and Mrs. Younger have two sons who are students at Ohio State University and a third son who is a member of this year's senior class in Celina High School.

The signing by Governor Davis this week of the Burke Automobile Bill is regarded with favor by thousands of Ohioans who have the interest of good roads at heart. The bill provides that no truck shall carry more than a ten ton load on Ohio's highways. Truck manufacturers and dealers intimate that they will ask an amendment providing a twelve ton load at the next session.

With The Women of To-day

"The pastime clearing house" is the idea of a woman, too? Mrs. Gertrude Gilmour of New York originated the plan and she is trying out the experiment in Los Angeles. Mrs. Gilmour is well known for her war work and it was really that which gave her the inspiration for her plan.

Here is the way the "pastime clearing house" works. A business man may have tickets to a lecture or a concert and be kept late at the office or called out of town. He telephones the clearing house and the resourceful secretary knows a dozen people who are hungry for a lecture on Greek art or a symphony concert. Perhaps a young clerk who usually spends his Saturday afternoons at the ball game suddenly learns he must meet his mother-in-law at the train. He calls the bureau and the secretary knows just as many baseball fans as music lovers and the ticket is put to use. This democratic amusement plan will benefit the poor and also those with small incomes who can not allow much in their budget for amusements.

Theaters, fraternal orders, churches and all organizations which undertake public entertainment will thus be assured of full patronage and the clearing house.

Mrs. WAGNER of PALM BEACH

Tells Girls How She Found Relief From Pain

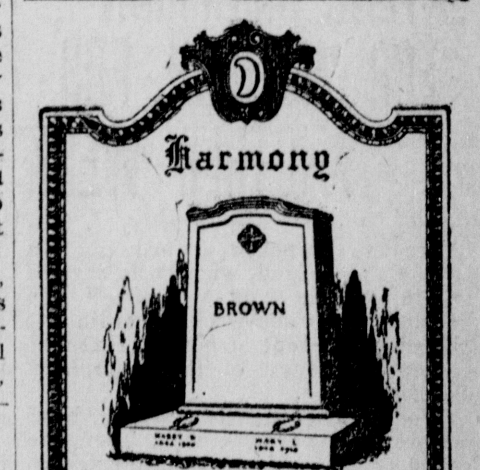

West Palm Beach, Fla.—"When I was 19 years old I was irregular and I had such terrible cramps it felt like a knife going through me. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I was cured. After I was married I had the same trouble caused by the added work of farming and heavy washings so I told my husband to get six bottles of the Vegetable Compound and by taking it regularly my troubles ceased and now I never have a pain or ache, and am regular. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and think every young girl should take it. You can publish this letter and it may be the means of helping some other girl or woman."

—Mrs. MARY M. WAGNER, Box 759, West Palm Beach, Florida.

While no woman is entirely free from periodic suffering it does not seem to be the plan of nature that woman should suffer so severely and when pain exists something is wrong which should be set right. Every girl who suffers from monthly cramps should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

Of Interest to the Farmer

FARM EXPENSES
LESS THIS YEAR
THAN LAST IN OHIO

A summary of the accounts of two groups of 50 farmers, one group in northeastern Ohio and one in northwestern Ohio, for one year, ending March 1, shows farming to have been far from financially profitable during past year, says Prof. J. I. Falconer, Department of Rural Economics of the Ohio State University. In northeastern Ohio the cash receipts for the year exceeded the cash expenses by $1,897. The inventory value of the livestock and feed on hand, however, decreased by $703. This left a net return of $1,194 as wage for the operator and interest on an average investment of $23,673. Due to the fact that the dairy farmer of the northwestern counties had a greater proportion of sales during the first half of the year when prices were highest, his net return for the year exceeded that of the farmer of northwestern counties.

In northwestern Ohio the receipts for the year exceeded the cash expenses by 1,676. The inventory value of the livestock and feed on hand decreased by 30 percent or 1,424. This left an average net return of $252 as wages for the operator and for interest on $37,300 investment. Receipts for the year were 51 percent of that of the previous year, while expenses were 2 percent less.

At the close of the year farm products were selling at just one half the price they brought at the beginning of the year. The present year promises a better showing, for while receipts may not be increased, it seems certain that expenses will be considerably reduced. Farm products are now selling at a point approximately 15 percent above the pre-war level, while commodities such as the farmer buys are 54 percent above the pre-war level. Inventories of livestock and crops have been reduced to a pre-war basis.

HANDSOME PRIZES
WILL BE AWARDED IN OHIO CONTEST

The scrub sire seems to be having his troubles. The United States Department of Agriculture and the Ohio State University through its Department of Animal Husbandry are conducting a campaign to locate every farmer in the state who will use nothing but purebred sires. The aid of school boys and girls has been solicited.

In order to make it worth while for the boys and girls and to inject a spirit of contest into the work prizes valued at hundreds of dollars are offered.

A handsome silk banner will be presented to the county that furnishes the largest number of names (in excess of 100) of breeders who use only unbreed sires on the farms.

First prize—one hundred dollars ($100.00) will be awarded to the boy or girl who enrolls the greatest number in excess of 50, who will use only purebred sires.

Second prize—a Hereford bull calf from the herd of J. V. Hill, Roundhead, Ohio.

Third prize—choice of one of the following bull calves: Holstein-Friesian offered by the Ohio State University; Guernsey, Circle W. Farm, Gates Mill, Ohio; Ayreshire, John Sherwin, South Farm, Willoughby, Ohio; Jersey, Mr. Kaler, Plain City, Ohio.

Fourth Prize—choice of the following boar pigs: Duroc Jersey offered by Thomas Johnson, Columbus, Ohio; Hampshire, Depew Head Marion, Ohio; Berkshire, Holington Bros., Creston, Ohio; Poland China, the Ohio State University.

Fifth prize—choice of a purebred ram lamb, Shopshire, L. B. Palmer, Pataskala, Ohio; Southdown and Merino, the Ohio State University.

This contest, which is open to any boy or girl, closes July 1. Print ed blanks will be furnished by the county agricultural agent or can be secured direct from the Department of Animal Husbandry, the Ohio State University, which is in charge of the campaign.

BRONZE TABLETS
FOR WAR STAMP
WORKERS GIVEN

Columbus, O.—(Special)—In almost every county in Ohio you will find somewhere in the county courthouse, or in the county seat post-office building a bronze tablet commemorating that county's part in the War Savings campaign during the war. The particular tablet shown above has just been placed on the federal building at Dayton, to perpetuate the part played by Montgomery county in the sale of War Savings Stamps. Counties which have not received such tablets may obtain same by applying to the Savings Division, Fourth Federal Reserve District, 40 West Gay Street, Columbus, Ohio.

SCULPTOR WEDS
CALIFORNIA GIRL

Wilmington, June 11.—Eli Harvey of New York, Wilmington boy, famous as a sculptor and Miss Grace Harvey of Oakland, Cal., were married in Windom, Minn., according to dispatches from Omaha, narrating the incident of the wedding of the noted artist. Mr. Harvey is a son of Rev. William P. Harvey.

It is explained that though the names of the bride and bridegroom are the same, there is no kinship. However, the families were intimately associated when Mr. and Mrs. Harvey were young folks in this county and later in Cincinnati.

REGARDED IMPORTANT

Courtesy is a business asset that has long been recognized and carefully carried out by some of the largest business organizations of the country. Public utility companies in particular have emphasized the value of courtesy in dealing with the public and the Bell telephone companies have long been noted for the unfailing courtesy of their employees.

The pleasant "number please" of the Bell operator and her polite "thank you," are familiar words to telephone users and have undoubtedly smoothed over many of the trials of a busy day.

"To the casual observer," H. W. Cleaver, manager of the Bell exchange here, said, "it would probably be surprising to learn that hundreds of thousands of tests made by telephone traffic experts of the Bell telephone companies that the use of 'please' does not add an appreciable length of time to the average call. In fact, the tests indicate that 'please' is a helpful adjunct to good service. 'Thank you' and 'you are welcome' are also very important phrases in the operators' vocabulary."

Not only are telephone operators urged to be constantly courteous, but courtesy is an important factor in the curriculum of the Bell telephone operators schools, which undoubtedly play an important part in making the telephone service in the United States far superior to that of any other country.

Before a girl can take her place as a regular switchboard, she must go through a course of training, usually lasting a month, in the operators' school.

"Every telephone operator employed by The Ohio Bell Telephone Company, receives a thorough training before entering the regular exchange work," said Manager Cleaver. In Columbus, Cleveland, Toledo, Dayton, Akron, Youngstown, Canton and Springfield schools are conducted for training operators; in many other cities and towns an instructor is attached to the exchange and in smaller places traveling instructors train the operators the same as the schools in the larger cities.

"To the telephone company a person who files a call is considered a customer coming up to a counter to purchase a commodity. The service is considered a personal service with a human force behind it."

"Courtesy, accuracy, speed," is the telephone triumvirate, coupled with the famous slogan, "the voice with the smile wins," according to Manager Cleaver.

The Bell system maintains a large force of experts throughout the country in order to see that courtesy is always a by-word among Bell employees.

WEEKLY REPORT ON CROP CONDITIONS

By C. J. West, Agricultural Statistician.

Corn planting ninety percent.. Completed.

And about ten percent of acreage has been cultivated. Corn is coming through the ground quickly and appears to be in fine condition.

About ninety percent of the corn is planted, taking the State as a whole and ten percent of the acreage has been cultivated. Corn cultivation is much farther along in the Eastern and Southern sections of the State of the State. The condition of wheat continues about the same as reported last week. There will doubtless be a falling off in the Spring wheat and barley acreage.

The reports from correspondents indicate a more or less uniform slight decrease in the acreage of all crops this year as compared with last year. Several explanations for this apparent decrease may be mentioned. First last year's acreage was generally large. Second, farmers have been working their land to capacity for the last few years and have raised crops on fields that in ordinary times would not have been planted. They have planted or sown fields to grain crops out of the ordinary rotation. As a result of this there is a general feeling among farmers that their land should have a rest and more clover and grasses be grown. Again, there has been a general shortage of help which has resulted in the farmer and his family doing more work than they would ordinarily care to do. The somewhat reduced acreage may generally be explained as a natural reaction or letting down after the strenuous efforts on the farm in the last few years. And the discouraging outlook due to the drop in prices and falling off in the demand for farm products may have some deterring effect upon farming operations.

TIPS ON GARDEN MAKING

LIQUID FERTILIZERS

Application of liquid fertilizer at the right time is one of the great secrets of successful gardening. A dose of liquid food often starts a vegetable or flower along when it is lagging and means a good yield where otherwise there might have been none.

Set aside some obscure corner of the garden and if there isn't an obscure corner, plan obscurity for it by planting castor beans or some bush to act as a permanent screen or screen it with a trellis for pole beans, morning glories or some other vine and behind this ornamental screen plan to place a barrel to contain liquid fertilizer right handy to the spot where it is needed.

A vinegar or molasses barrel from the grocer's forms the most convenient receptacle. If possible place it on a substantial foundation of some kind so that the bottom will be high enough from the ground to permit of the introduction of a wooden or metal faucet of good bore near the bottom of the barrel to draw off the fertilizer into a pail or sprinkling can.

Burlap sacks to be suspended on strips laid across the top of the barrel so the manure will be held suspended and not be allowed to pile up in the bottom of the barrel is the best plan. Burlap sacks may be sewed to hoops with strong cord so that they can be readily lifted out and in.

Poultry manure is very useful and usually available for liquid fertilizer. Two pecks to a barrel will give the proper solution. Pulverized sheep manure in its commercial form is an ideal fertilizer for liquid manure and nitrate of soda is best applied in solution which can be made readily in a barrel.

With a faucet to draw off the liquid much of the back breaking work of bending over to dip the fertilizer out is avoided and considerable time is saved. It becomes an easy matter to devote a few moments a day to applying the fertilizer and refilling the barrel when necessary. The fertilizer should not be applied oftener than once a week to any one vegetable or flowering plant.

Prevent Stomach Worms in Sheep

"DEAD" 47 YEARS, BROTHERS SWAP YARNS OF LONG AGO.

Silas & William Tuttle. INTL.

Forty-seven years of gossip is being threshed out today by William I. and Silas W. Tuttle at the home of the former in Dorchester, Mass. Not since the outbreak of the Civil War in 1860, have the two brothers seen each other, and for forty-five years of that time, neither one knew if the other was alive. Silas, who was born in Bedford, N. Y., is seventy-seven years old, and his brother William, who was born in Tarrytown, N. Y., is six years his senior. They were mere boys when their father and mother took the family west to the plains of Illinois, then a part of the western frontier. A few years later the Civil War broke out and both boys enlisted in the Northern Army. William served three years in the 14th Illinois Infantry and Silas served four years in the Tenth Illinois Cavalry. After the war the brothers separated. Silas wandered West and began the life of a miner, trapper and prospector. He prospered exceedingly. He has remained unmarried all his life. William settled in Dorchester forty years ago. He has also prospered, although his children have all died. Through a nephew the brothers were brought together. The nephew traced both through the pension records in Washington. Silas then decided to make the trip East and get acquainted again with brother William.

PERSONAL FRIENDS OF LINCOLN ASK FOR RE-ERECTION OF OLD STATUE.

President Harding photographed with personal friends of Abraham Lincoln on the White House grounds. The old associates of Lincoln called at the White House to ask the President's aid in the movement to have the old statue of Lincoln re-erected on its old site on the grounds of the Washington

Perhaps Mr. Churchill may gain the reputation of wearing funny little waistcoats.

HAVE YOU A FLY CATCHER?

You can catch all the flies your neighborhood with this simple home-made barrel fly-trap. It is big enough to hold a whole barrel of flies. This simple but very effective fly-trap is made of any kind of a barrel with a cone of wire fly screening fastened into one end and extending into the barrel about half way. The apex of the cone is cut off, so that there will be a hole about one inch in diameter through which the flies escape up into the barrel, where they are trapped. Three little blocks of wood hold the barrel about two inches off the ground. A pan containing bait is set under the barrel. The flies swarm into the barrel to get at the bait. Instead of leaving the barrel the same way they came they are attracted by the light streaming into the barrel from the top which is fitted tightly with a piece of fly netting. Try this in your back yard and watch the results.

She is now living in San Francisco under an assumed name to establish a residence there in order to bring suit for divorce from her husband, a popular Mil-

The former-Princess claims that Captain Schultz, when he married her knew that her first husband, Capt. T. Turpin had been killed in action in France.

DEPUTY SHERIFF FIRES AT FLEEING MAN

PRISONER HALTED BY SHOTS FROM GUN OF OFFICER

Deputy Sheriff George Birch shot twice at Thomas Soward, 26, of Dayton, arrested on a charge of transporting liquor, who attempted an escape from Deputies Birch and Joe Day on California street at 10:30 o'clock, Friday night, neither shot taking effect, but serving to stop the fleeing prisoner.

Recaptured, Soward was confined in the county jail all night and Saturday morning entered a plea of guilty to the charge placed against him in the court of Magistrate J. E. Jones. He was fined $500 and costs. Soward was arrested by Sheriff Lincoln Funderburg and Deputies Birch and Day on the Fairground road after an exciting chase through the county, earlier in the evening.

It is alleged that Soward had made a previous trip to the city with liquor from his home in Dayton, and Sheriff Funderburg was on the look-out for a return trip. At six o'clock Friday evening, the officers learned that Soward was on his way here. Prosecuting Attorney J. Kenneth Williamson, swore out an affidavit for the man and provided the officers with a search warrant in order to search the automobile. The Sheriff's car, from which Soward's car was coming, and the first sight of the hunted car was the signal for a chase that carried the officers and their prey over many roads. He attempted to confuse the officers by sharp turns from one road to another and by turning his machine lights off and on, but the Sheriff and deputies held to the trail until the machine turned into the Fairground where the arrest was made.

Two one-gallon jugs and three quart bottles of corn whiskey were confiscated by the officers and Soward, who was accompanied by his wife and little daughter, was brought to this city. Because of the fact that he would have to remain in the county jail overnight, Soward asked permission to take his wife and daughter to the home of Glen Thompson on California street and Deputies Birch and Day took them to the Thompson home.

While Deputy Birch entered the house with the Sowards, Day waited in the Sheriff's machine. After bidding goodnight to his family, Soward came out with the officer, but instead of climbing in the automobile, he ran up California street. Birch shot twice at the fleeing figure, and the man fell down. Being first believed that he had been shot. He said Saturday morning that he had stubbed his toe and fallen. The shooting led to a rumor circulated here Saturday that the man had been killed which was erroneous, neither of the bullets fired striking him.

WILBERFORCE

The fifty eighth annual commencement exercises of Wilberforce University will open Sunday morning at 10 o'clock in the Auditorium of Galway Hall with the baccalaureate sermon delivered to the graduates by Bishop A. J. Carey of Chicago, Ills. The faculty and graduates will meet at Carnegie Library and march to the place of service.

In the afternoon at 3 o'clock Dr. J. M. Wheeler of Pittsburgh, Pa., is to deliver an address before the Religious Societies of the school. At 7:30 in the evening Bishop E. F. Lee, the Senior Bishop of the A. M. E. church, and at one time president of the school, is to deliver the annual sermon to the graduates of Payne Theological Seminary.

President J. A. Gregg and the Secretary, Mr. Carl Jenkins, are making extensive preparations to entertain the visitors from all parts of the country. During the week some of the noted educators of the race will appear on the platform and deliver addresses on various phases of education for the colored youth. The Trustee Board of the institution will open its session Tuesday morning. Bishop J. H. Jones, its chairman, will probably not be able to attend, owing to a serious sick spell he had last week in Pittsburgh, and for a time it was thought he would not be able to survive. He was brought home Thursday night and is still confined to his room under the care of several physicians. Bishop Heard, of Philadelphia, the vice-president of the board, will probably preside.

Elaborate arrangements are being made by the Alumni Association for the inauguration of the new president, Rev. J. A. Gregg, who was elected last year to succeed Dr. W. S. Scarborough. Dr. R. C. Ransom of Oceanport, N. J., President of the Alumni Association, will preside. Many of the old graduates of the school have sent word that they will attend and assist in making the work of Dr. Gregg a success.

The commencement exercises will close Thursday morning at 10 o'clock by the Commencement address delivered to the graduates by Dr. E. H. Lindley, Chancellor of the University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kansas.

TWO CREOLE SUPPERS

The main dishes in the following two supper menus are old Creole recipes, delicious and nourishing.

Creole Rice Dish
Asparagus Salad
Jelly Tarts.

Tea ————— Jelly Tarts

Creole Rice Dish: Put into your fry ing pan 2 tablespoons of drippings and 1-2 cup of finely chopped uncooked onions. Fry the onions until cooked, then add 1 cup of rice which has been washed and boiled (measure the rice before cooking it) and 2 cups of canned or freshly stewed tomatoes; season with 1 teaspoon of salt, cook all together for 10 minutes, then spread the mixture on a platter; cover with 1 cup (or 1-4 pound) of finely chopped American cheese, and slip the platter into the oven until the cheese is melted. Then serve hot (setting the platter on a thick, folded napkin) and, if desired, with the top of the dish sprinkled over with minced parsley.

Creole Beef
Tomato Salad

Tea ————— Angel Food Shortcake

Creole Beef: Melt in a saucepan 3 tablespoons of butter and cook in it 1 tablespoon of finely-minced onion and 1 tablespoon of finely-cut green pepper, when onion is tender, add 3 tablespoons of flour, stirring until smooth; then 1 cup of broth or thinned brown gravy (from a previous meal) and 1-2 cup of tomato juice. Season with 1-2 teaspoon of salt, a dash of pepper, 1-4 teaspoon grated horseradish, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, and last, add 2 cups of cooked and diced beef. Let all boil up until piping hot, then turn the mixture out onto a platter and encircle it with hot rice border.

Angel Food Shortcake: (This recipe was generously contributed by a reader of this column—Mrs. J.—and I wish to thank her for it here.) "Make an angel food cake in the ordinary way, then remove all the brown outside, thus leaving the cake perfectly white. (A square cake mold cuts to best advantage when used for this purpose.) When ready to serve cut a very thin slice from the cake (this is for one individual portion), put it on a dessert plate then cover it with strawberries and sprinkle on them 1 tablespoon of sugar. (I use granulated, but powdered may be substituted if desired). Now, over the slice of the angel cake and finish with a second layer of the sweetened strawberries. Whipped cream is not necessary, but may be used.

For a guest dinner, garnish this dessert with a half-slice of orange and place a garden rose on the edge of the dish.

World Is Small Place After All Thinks Postmaster Rice

Postmaster H. E. Rice is a disciple of the ancient theory that this world is a small place after all.

Mr. Rice bases his opinion on the comparative size of the universe on a recent occurrence which befell him while visiting his son, Ensign Rice, U. S. S. Tennessee, in New York City.

Many Xenia people will remember Elmer Paine, son of Dr. Paine, one-time Xenia dentist, who broke into newspaper work more than thirty years ago. Leaving Xenia, Paine was associated with Mr. Rice on the old Press-Republic in Springfield.

Later, the former Xenian became connected with the Associated Press, serving at the White House for that news gathering organization during the regime as president of the late Theodore Roosevelt, whose warm personal friend he was. He is now in Washington for the A. P. "covering" interstate commerce commission activities.

It was therefore with much surprise that Mr. Rice learned that the Commander of the ship on which his son is located, is a son of Mr. Paine, being commissioned several years ago, it being coincidental that the sons of two former friends and co-workers, should be thus flung together by fate. Although acquainted, the young naval officers did not know that their fathers had been friends years ago, and both Xenians.

This tale when told to Judge H. L. Smith recalled to the mind of that former jurist a similar incident in which he figured several years ago, when his son, now Commander Earl Smith, U. S. N., was graduating from Annapolis. Judge Smith entertained at dinner for his son, and several of his friends, one of the young men bringing his father along. Judge Smith's son was particularly friendly with this classmate and it was learned at the dinner that the boy's father had been a classmate of Judge Smith in law school at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, where they too, had been particularly warm friends.

AN ADVERTISEMENT HELPED HER

Mrs. Lucille Mackey, 16 Buena Vista St., Washington, Pa., writes: "Last winter my 3-year-old girl caught a bad cold which left her with a dry cough. It bothered her most at night and she would cough until she vomited. I think she must have had whooping cough. I saw an advertisement for Foley's Honey and Tar. I tried it and bought two bottles and her cough left her before she finished the second bottle. She had gotten awfully thin but now she is as fat as ever." Sayre & Hemphill.

The Revolt of Vera Sanderson

By JANE PHELPS.

HAPPY AND SAD DAYS IN THE COUNTRY.

CHAPTER 65

I was delighted that I was to ride. Not even knowing that Margaret had compelled Keith to give her the amount my horse would cost, could spoil my pleasure. I did not resent the constant demand his sister made for money; her seeming determination to have everything he gave me and—more, as I perhaps should have had had we been living by ourselves. Keith seemed to think it only natural thing to do, and did whatever she asked so willingly that I had fallen into the way of paying no attention.

Then, too, I was not extravagant in my desires. I liked pretty clothes, but was far more annoyed that I couldn't select the colors I wished to wear than that Margaret objected to the price. That she invariably objected to my wearing the colors I knew were most becoming, was a constant source of irritation—rather, it had been before I wore black for Father Sanderson, I would now wear it for three months longer, so that cause for discord was done away with for the time.

I had been surprised that Margaret was wearing colors when I came back from mother's. Soft gray's and lavender's to be sure, but colors. I was soon to be enlightened as to her reason for taking off black.

"I heard mamma talking to Mrs. De Lisle about you today, Aunt Vera," Irene told me as we started for our afternoon ride.

"I guess she didn't say anything very bad, my ears didn't burn," I replied, just dying to ask what she had heard.

"It wasn't so much about you as about your clothes. She said she wasn't going to wear black any more because it kept Uncle Keith as well as herself from going out and having a good time. She said as long you wore black, and you would have to wear it a long time for your father, she thought it was her duty to look brighter and go out more for Uncle Keith's sake."

So Margaret had even planned that my grief would work to her advantage with Keith. How she turned and twisted everything to suit her own desires! I felt very bitter toward her as I rode beside the children. Even my favorite sport was almost spoiled because of what I felt. And I had not ridden so long.

"I won't let her spoil everything for me—I won't!" I said to myself. We would be back in town in another six weeks, and then I would have no horse. I knew well enough that Margaret would make it impossible for me to ride in town. It was expensive and she would insist upon having on equal amount to do with as she wished.

While we were very well-to-do, indeed, Keith was not a rich man as riches are considered nowadays. Margaret, of course, had her income, but many stocks had cut their dividends and she depended upon Keith to make them good the difference, as well as providing—not his half, but two-thirds of all house expenses, although there were three of them and only two of us. "It isn't fair!" I had once said to Keith. He had reprimanded me severely.

"It is my pleasure to do what I can for Margaret and the children. As long as you do not suffer for anything, I cannot understand your objection."

He had said it in a manner that prohibited any reply. He had told the truth, I did not suffer for anything; I had far more than ever I had had before my marriage. But inwardly I still felt it unfair that my husband should spend so lavishly for another family, even that of his sister.

Those last six weeks in the country I was happy and miserable by turns. Mrs. De Lisle was a veritable thorn in the flesh. I was at times so jealous I wept miserably, and was sure Keith was in love with her, he was so attentive. Then he would say something that made me think he loved me too well to care for her and I would sing for joy. I was either up in the clouds or down in the depths most of the time.

I sailed with them all one Saturday, but there were no more moonlight parties, and I could not get over being cheated out of the one they had not yet ceased talking about. I rode every day, sometimes alone, often with the children. It was through Irene that most of my information came as to what was going on. I should have discouraged her but didn't. I was too anxious to be informed.

"Mamma and Mrs. De Lisle are going to meet Uncle Keith in town today and go to luncheon with him," she told me one morning as we returned from our early ride. They had left when we reached the house. There was another train that would get me in about 12. I would take it, go to Keith's office, and also go to lunch with him.

I dressed carefully although in great haste, and at a little after 12 I reached Keith's office. To my delight he was still there.

Tomorrow—A Luncheon in Town—And Tears.
